NO DINNERS HONORS DEPEW'S BIRTHDAY

Senator Was Seventy-Two Today, But Illness Confining Him To His Suburban Home.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, April 23.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew was seventy-two years old today and received many congratulatory messages at his suburban home where he is confined by an illness, the exact nature of which is not known even to his intimates. For the first time in fifteen years the Montauk club of Brooklyn gives no banquet in celebration of Senator Depew's birthday this year. It is at his own request that the annual dinner in the club does not take place. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, the president of the club, recently extended to Senator Depew an invitation to be the guest of the club, as usual. The senator sent a reply in which he declined on the ground of ill health.

HOME FROM THE PACIFIC COAST

THE MISSES ECHLIN ARRIVED IN CITY THIS MORNING.

IN WORST OF EARTHQUAKE

Despite Reassuring Reports to the Contrary They Were in Frisco on Terrible Morning.

The first Janesville people to arrive home from the scene of the terrible catastrophe on the Pacific coast were the Misses Julia and Edith Echlin, who alighted from the North-Western train at 11:45 this morning. Perhaps the first sight of familiar old scenes was never more grateful to weary pilgrims. For, notwithstanding the reassuring reports that came from Los Angeles on Friday, the Misses Echlin were in San Francisco on the morning of the disaster. They arrived in the Golden City at three o'clock Tuesday morning and went directly to the Hotel Brooklyn. To this hostelry they had been directed by a friend. It was a frame structure and the accommodations were not the best. They regretted that they had not chosen one of the two other hotels which had been recommended. Both of these buildings collapsed during the upheaval and many of the inmates lost their lives. The period of their visit was to be short and they kept their suite of rooms. During the day they also learned the way to and visited the ferry which was to take them over to Oakland Wednesday morning.

As if Seized and Shaken

With the horrible sensation of being rocked and tossed about in their beds they awoke about five o'clock Wednesday morning. That it was no evil dream but some terrible reality they quickly realized as the chandelier globes came crashing to the floor and chiffoniers and chairs were thrown from the side walls. Even as they sat up to stare wide-eyed at what was going on about them, they were grappled as if by invisible hands and shaken violently. In a few moments the motion seemed to subside and they hastened to dress. The meaning of what had been happening dawned on them quickly though they had no means of knowing that the results had been serious. They got their belongings together and closed their suitcases with all possible celerity. Just before they left their rooms the building shook again. At the hotel desk the night clerk, badly confused, gave the hotel the worst of it in making change. This they did not notice until afterwards. The swinging doors were off the bar room and the floor was covered with broken glass and liquor. Once outside they saw that the cornices and fire-escapes had been torn off the hotel and the remnants littered the sidewalk. A building alongside had collapsed like an egg-shell.

Another Shock at Breakfast

Fantastic costumes were in evidence everywhere. One man in a bathing suit was staring at the scenes about him blissfully unaware of his own ridiculous appearance. Many were sitting on the curbstones and putting on the few clothes they had seized before their flight. A man passed in scant dress, but clinging tightly to a bird-cage. The crowd seemed stupefied. Many moved unwillingly at the command of men who were already urging them to places of safety. The dynamiting of buildings had commenced. The Misses Echlin counted eight fires in as many distinct sections of the city as they moved with the throng towards the wharf they had visited the day before. When they reached there and looked back the whole city seemed to be a mass of flames. There appeared to be thousands of people on the dock and at first the hope of getting aboard seemed small. But quickly the multitude had been swallowed up by the big ferry and it was moving towards Oakland. While the Janesville young women were eating their breakfast in an Oakland restaurant there was another earthquake shock. They hastened to the street again. The din of the dynamiting in San Francisco could be heard distinctly. At night they boarded a train for the east. It was not their train, but the officials permitted them to stay aboard until the next morning. In the meantime they had mailed a postal from Oakland to L. D. Brode at Los Angeles, telling them that they were safe. It was impossible to telegraph. The telegram they sent from a city in Nevada on Thursday arrived here this morning only a few hours before their train.

HONORED MEMORY OF SHAKESPEARE

Today is Birthday And Death Day Anniversaries of The World's Greatest Poet.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Stratford-On-Avon, April 23.—Lovers of Shakespeare gathered here in force today for the customary observance of the birthday and death-day of the greatest poet the world ever has known. At sunrise the bells of Holy Trinity church rang out their silver tones, reminding all within hearing that in this little village, so quaint, so quiet, and so delightfully removed from the rush and crush of present-day life, there was born, three hundred and forty-two years ago, England's supreme genius. An impressive ceremony was held at the church this afternoon, when the mayor, the trustees of Shakespeare's birthplace, and deputations from schools and Shakespeare clubs throughout the United Kingdom came to lay their floral tributes on the tomb.

MONEY FOR SEED NOT YET VOTED

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL LAID OVER.

STEEL RAILROAD TIE NEXT?

New Device Sent to Patent Office—
Other News and Gossip of The Nation's Capital.
(By William Wolf Smith.)

Washington, D. C., April 20.—(Special correspondence.)—The agricultural appropriation bill was to have come up for consideration in the house of representatives this week, but the committee on appropriations asked the chairman of the committee on agriculture, which prepares the agricultural bill, to give way in order that the bill providing for the expenditures in the District of Columbia during the next fiscal year might have the right of way. After several consultations with Speaker Cannon, Chairman Wadsworth consented to the program laid out and in consequence the farmers of the country will not know definitely for several days just what it is proposed to do for their advancement. The agricultural appropriation bill carries this year a total appropriation of about seven millions of dollars, in round figures. The first money appropriated by congress was provided in a bill which authorized the commissioner of patents to expend "one thousand dollars in the purchase and distribution of rare and valuable seeds and in the publication of agricultural statistics." That was seventy-five years ago. The department of agriculture was created in 1862 as a bureau of the interior department. The head of this bureau was designated as the commissioner of agriculture and later, during Cleveland's first administration, the position was raised to the dignity of a cabinet office.

Through all the years since Norman Coleman, of Missouri, was first appointed to hold the portfolio of agriculture, the amount of money provided for the purchase and distribution of "rare and valuable seeds" has grown until last year a third of a million dollars was made available for this purpose. But in all these years the principal use to which the money has been put has been the purchase of just as many cheap seeds as could be secured for the money at the disposal of the secretary of agriculture. Instead of using this fund in the "purchase and distribution of rare and valuable seeds," the secretary has apparently considered his duty performed when he bought as many cheap seeds of the commonest varieties as he could get for the money. It is true that some valuable seeds have been secured. Sugar beets from Germany, Kaffir corn from Africa and alfalfa from various points of the Orient have been introduced into the agricultural regions of the country. But the bulk of the money has been expended in the purchase of the commonest varieties of garden seeds, such as cucumbers, lettuce, turnips, onions, tomatoes and like garden vegetables, without any benefit whatever to the farmer or to agricultural science.

Some years ago President Cleveland returned the agricultural appropriation bill to the house without his approval because he disapproved of the "seed item." Since that time there has been a growing disposition to cut out altogether this useless waste of public funds. Useless, because the seeds distributed are neither new nor useful in the way of educating the agriculturist. But all efforts to cut out the free seed clause of the bill have been abortive until the present time. This year, however, under the leadership of Messrs. Wadsworth and Cocks, of New York, the committee decided to leave the free seed clause out of the bill, and as it will be reported to the house, that one item of about $300,000 is eliminated. Of course there will be a vigorous attempt to put it back when the bill comes up for consideration, but there is a growing sentiment throughout the country in favor of the committee's action. Thousands of letters have been received by members of the house during the past few weeks commending the action of the committee in striking out the free seed clause of the bill. These letters are evidently spontaneous and they demonstrate that the people of the country generally, even the recipients of the "bounty" of the government are not attracted by the receipt of five cents worth of vegetable seeds.

Whenever a measure of public importance is before congress for consideration, interested parties find no difficulty in securing countless signatures from people, especially in country districts for or against the measure. But the letters received from persons opposed to the free distribution of seeds are not of this class. They come from individuals and are evidently spontaneous. One of these was received by Chairman Wadsworth from one of the most prominent farmers in his district and it reads as follows:

"Through your courtesy I am once more in receipt of a packet of seeds from our Uncle Samuel's garden. Might I ask you to see the dear old gentleman and tell him that while appreciating his great kindness, I think he had better go out of this seed distributing business and use the money it costs in some other way. As I hope your honorable body, by refusing to make an appropriation, will do away with the miserable practice of giving away seeds at the public expense. Be assured that you will have the hearty approval of all sensible citizens."

This is only a sample. Hundreds of similar epistles have been received by members from every section of the country and they come by every mail. And so far as can be learned at this time not a single protest, not a single plea for the continuance of the free seed graft has been received.

The majority of the committee on agriculture, the secretary of agriculture, the chief of the bureau of plant industry and the president himself opposes the continuance of this wasteful and useless expenditure of public money. Next week it will be known whether the house will stand by the committee on agriculture or not.

A Washingtonian has invented a steel tie which may revolutionize railroad track laying. He has forwarded a model of a steel cross tie and attachments to the Rock Island railroad at Chicago with a view to its adoption by that company in its construction department. The tie, which the party has had patented, is corrugated on the bottom to prevent slipping and a device on the angle bars and fish plates provides for contraction and expansion. The rail joints by this device are not put together end to end, but are cut on the bias and spliced in such a way as to preclude the possibility of any jar. If this device should prove practicable in its use on railroads it would do away with the use of timber as ties and be a boon to railroads because of their lasting qualities, it being stated that a steel tie would last several times longer than the average wood tie, which is about eight years.

The curious experience of being struck by lightning and afterward inquiring what happened, occurred to Walter Stiles, a surveyor of the Townsend Inlet life saving station on the coast of North Carolina several nights ago. Stiles has written the superintendent of the life saving service in this city, telling him of his strange experience. It appears that on the night in question there arose a heavy storm while Stiles was on duty at the station. About nine o'clock he had occasion to leave the station and go into the open. No more had he reached the outside of the building, than a severe clap of thunder rained out and a short time later Stiles staggered under a stroke of lightning, at the same time asking a nearby patrol of watchmen what was happening. His hat was gone and he said he felt as though some one had waylaid him and clubbed him on the back of the head. The watchmen examined the place where he had fallen and found the sand had been somewhat ruffled in its contact with Stiles' body. Stiles says he did not see the lightning and is ignorant of ever hearing a thunder clap, so it was plain that he had been knocked down by the flash of lightning. He was not seriously injured, but was so badly shaken up that another man watched the long hours of the night with him.

Notwithstanding all the white man, through the means of the Indian bureau of the government has done for the red man of this country, there still lingers in the breast of the Indian a suspicion toward the "palefaces." Speaking of the Indian's suspicion of the white man, Commissioner of Indian Affairs Leupp says:

"In actual life the Indian is suspicious of the white race and wants nothing to do with us. He clings to the ways of his ancestors, insisting that they are better than ours and he resents every effort of the government either to educate his children or to show him how he can turn an honest dollar for himself by other means than his grandfather used—or an appropriation from the treasury. Strive as we may to gloss it over with poetic fancies or hide it under statistical reports of progress, that is the plain truth. We must win over the Indian children by sympathetic interest and unobtrusive guidance. It is a mistake to start the little ones in the path of civilization by snatching all the ties of affection between them and their parents and teach them to despise the aged and non-progressive members of their families. The sensible plan is to nourish their love of father, mother and home, and then to utilize this affection as a means of reaching through them the hearts of the elders."

President Roosevelt is quite a tennis player and nearly every pretty afternoon he adjourns to the tennis court in the rear of the white house and indulges in an hour's recreation in playing this game. He is often joined by Mr. Jussard, the French ambassador, who covers the back line; the president preferring the heavy work at the net. Others who "sport" with Mr. Roosevelt in the game are Commissioner of Corporations Garfield, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor, L. O. Murray.

Vice-President Fairbanks has accepted an invitation to address the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, at Birmingham, Ala., on May 8th. Mr. Fairbanks is a fraternal delegate of the northern Methodist church to this conference.

The shirts of street frocks are unquestionably less voluminous than they were in the past and in some instances were. They are, in a vast majority of the best models, smooth fitting over the hips, and though they flare considerably and the flare begins considerably below the hip curve, there is nothing extreme in the general outline.

The bolero retains so firm a foothold that it would take a general revolution in fashion to oust it, and the revolution is highly improbable.

Silk remains the most popular fabric for gowns for every occasion, and Suesine is a conspicuous silk in all the shops as well as in the costumes emerging daily from our most fashionable modistes for midday's summer wear. For the closely draped bodices in vogue now it is the ideal material because of its characteristic suppleness. Suesine silk of an exquisite shade of lilac was the fabric selected for the chic, softly flowing model of my illustration, and expresses a type of bonfancy that appeals to the woman of taste. Suesine silk is one of the most successful innovations, in that it is inexpensive, being composed of a skillful combination of silk and cotton, which lends to it all the effectiveness of the finest silk, while placing it within the purse limit of her whose wardrobe allowance is moderate.

The millinery of 1906 is not unlike the style of 1896, when a woman's hat almost covered her forehead; but the effect sought for the new season is not to conceal the forehead, since the hat is too tiny for that. As much of the front hair is in evidence as ever, for the shape sets almost on top of the head. The tilt forward is only the effect of the high bandeau.

Straw is a popular material for spring hats, also chip and fine crin, while all-lace and all-mousseline hats are carrying the day for dressy functions.

The shirts of street frocks are unquestionably less voluminous than they were in the past and in some instances were. They are, in a vast majority of the best models, smooth fitting over the hips, and though they flare considerably and the flare begins considerably below the hip curve, there is nothing extreme in the general outline.

The bolero retains so firm a foothold that it would take a general revolution in fashion to oust it, and the revolution is highly improbable.

...FORTY YEARS AGO...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, April 23, 1866.—New Feature of Manufacturing.—Messrs. Britton & Harrison have attached to their furniture establishment, an upholstery department, where not only lounges are manufactured, but tete-a-tetes, chairs, etc., are made in the best style and art.

Seizure of Distillery.—The Internal Revenue Officers seized the distillery and fixtures of Jacobson, Rank and Turner at Fort Atkinson, on Thursday last. Those gentlemen have been making bogus returns and now have the privilege of paying a fine of $2,100 as a penalty for cheating their great and good Uncle Sam. Honesty is the best policy sayeth the old proverb. A. E. Burpee of this city brought them to time.

Rock River Improvement Charter.—

The act authorizing the improvement of Rock River is now being published. Since the law has thus become officially printed, it only now remains for us to get to work under it with all delay. The first step is, of course, to obtain a working survey, which can only be done by having the necessary funds to prosecute the work with. The counties in Illinois bordering on the proposed improvement, we understand, have already obtained their proportion of the money, and we hope our people will not lag in the matter. On Saturday next there is to be a meeting in this city of the County Advisory committee, and we trust every member of that committee will be able to bring the required sum—$100—from his town. The water in the river will soon be at a convenient working stage, and not an hour should be lost in the prosecution of the work.

SCROFULA AN INHERITED MISFORTUNE

Every one has a hereditary right to a pure blood supply, which insures a strong, healthy body; but how many do we see who have inherited that greatest of all misfortunes, Scrofula, and are struggling under a legacy of disease and suffering? Scrofula is a constitutional trouble handed down from parent to child, a curse from generation to generation as long as the foundation of the blood is diseased we see this awful affliction manifested in many ways, such as enlarged glands or tumors of the neck, which often burst and become discharging ulcers, weak eyes, chronic Catarrh of the head, skin diseases, etc. This blighting disease being so firmly entrenched in the blood often attacks the bones, resulting in White Swelling, or hip disease, while a pallid, waxy appearance of the skin, loss of strength, and often lung affections show that the disease is entirely destroying the rich, nutritive qualities of the blood. There is but one way to cure Scrofula and that is to purify the blood and rid it of the genus of disease, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. Its purifying and building-up properties make it the ideal remedy for Scrofula. S. S. S. searches out and destroys all poisons and germs, gives strength, richness and vigor to the weak, polluted blood and cures Scrofula permanently. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine, made from roots, herbs and barks and may be taken with absolute safety by young or old. It so thoroughly removes the poison from the blood that no signs of it are ever seen again and posterity is blessed with a pure blood supply. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

If We Take the Bit in Our Teeth

It's because we feel sure we are right.

We want your trade and will exercise every legitimate effort to get it. The question is not whether you can afford to buy, but whether you can afford NOT to buy of us.

If you buy a vehicle of us and are not satisfied, then it's our job and your money. We would rather lose a sale, or dozens of them, than have anyone leave our doors dissatisfied. It's the come-again customer we want.

In our large line of vehicles of all sorts, quality is never sacrificed to meet competing prices. Yet in the truest sense the goods we offer are "bargains." We dislike the word—it has been so much abused—but no other will answer.

The choicest selections from hundreds. The assortment is complete, styles are correct. Seeing is believing. Will you come in and look?

FROM FOOTVILLE

MR. CHAS. DEVINS says that he just recently consulted Dr. Richards, Dentist, and had a very sore tooth extracted.

The best of it was "that it didn't hurt him one bit."

People don't say such things unless it means something.

If they experienced the least pain they wouldn't be backward about saying so.

The facts are that Dr. Richards receives just such assurances from hundreds of his patients.

The reason is "he is actually doing PAINLESS DENTISTRY" in Janesville.

If you want the kind of dentistry that DON'T HURT, had you better consult the man who makes a specialty of PAINLESS work?

Want All the Cash Tomorrow.
The committee appointed at the public meeting on Friday is requested to assemble at the Rock County bank at nine o'clock Tuesday morning to authorize the treasurer to forward the money. It is urged that all amounts not yet paid be left at that bank at once, so that there may be no delay in getting the sum total started on its way. A number of the churches, including St. Peter's English Lutheran and St. Mary's Catholic, will take up collections next Sunday. The Eagles took up a collection yesterday and the Elks will do so at a meeting tomorrow evening.

Agent Johnson of the St. Paul road announces that a special train bound for California with supplies will pass through here early Wednesday morning. Clothing, etc., may be left at the depot and will be loaded in a car open for Janesville. There will be no charges. Agent Lindsey of the North-Western railroad announces that any package addressed to the Red Cross Society, San Francisco, may be sent without charge over the road he represents at any time. Many people will gladly contribute if a committee of citizens will arrange in some manner for collecting and boxing the donations.

After a brief illness of one week with pneumonia, Mrs. William Isaac passed away at her home, 151 Glen street, at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Death came as a great shock to her many friends, although in a measure it was not unlooked for by her family. The best of care had been given her, but it seemed that the heavenly rest should be hers. The deceased was born in Devonshire, England, in 1840. She was married to William Isaac April 13, 1876. Five children were born to bless their home, one passing away in infancy. Besides a husband there are four children left to mourn the loss of a loving mother—Jabez and Mrs. Byron McCray Jones of Chicago and Fred and Mabel of this city; and one little granddaughter, Evelyn Isaac. She also leaves four brothers, one in England, two in Cazenovia, Wis., and one in Texas. She has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church since childhood and in which society she has many warm friends. The funeral will be held from the home on Wednesday. The hour will be given later.

NEW BUNKO GAME OF SMOOTH BUNKO MEN

Two Strangers Can Easily Take In the Ruralite or the City by The Process.

One of the new feature bunko games of the present year has been tried successfully on a Mankato, Minnesota farmer. It is so clever and yet so simple that in fear of some resident of this section of the country will bite on it, it is reprinted for their benefit. A farmer living some miles southeast of Mankato has reported how he was bunkoed by a sleek stranger. While working about the house he was accosted by a well-dressed man driving a nobby rig who reported the loss of a valuable diamond pin which had been a present to him. While he cared nothing for the value of the pin—a small matter of $200—yet its associations made its recovery important to him. He offered a reward of $50 for its return to him at a certain hotel.

The farmer made a careful search of the road in front of his house, but with no success. Two days later another man, dressed as a tramp, appeared and offered to eat and during his meal he showed to the farmer a pin that he had found a short distance down the road.

The farmer recognized by its description the first stranger's lost jewel and, eager to make a few dollars, offered to buy it. The tramp thought it was worth $25, which the farmer quickly paid. Upon this arrival in town the farmer could not find the loser of the pin and a jeweler who examined it pronounced it worthless.

The answer is signed by W. J. Vickery, the chief postal inspector.

BELOIT COLLEGE STUDENTS MEET WITH AN ACCIDENT

We're Gathering Flowers When Horse Ran Away And Was Badly Injured.

Saturday afternoon a Beloit college youth named Patterson accompanied by a young lady said to have been Miss Carr, tied a Beloit livery horse near A. F. Tolles' farm north of Beloit and went off to discuss Shakespeare and gather flowers. "Pansies are for thoughts," said Mr. Patterson, and before Miss Carr could reply a shout from the roadside revealed the fact that the horse had in some manner broken loose and was dashing down the road. Instead of turning towards Beloit the frightened animal slipped on the steep embankment near the interurban tracks and down went buggy and horse onto the tracks. While the Shakespearean student watched kind-hearted men and women lifted the poor animal from the track, washed the ugly wound in its side and a small boy ran over a mile to telephone for a veterinary surgeon from Beloit. The buggy was demolished, the horse badly injured and the student and his best girl went back to Beloit after dark to escape inquiries of kind friends. They were "mighty much obliged" for the aid given them, but that was all.

The Man With the Muck Rake

President Roosevelt Tells In Ringing Words How He Can Work Good or Evil

Clean Living and Right Thinking Must Be Brought About Spiritually and Ethically—War on Forces of Evil Strongly Urged If Conducted With Sanity, Honesty and Self Restraint—Progressive Tax on Vast Fortunes Advocated to Prevent Their Inheritance or Transmission in Entirety

In an address at the recent laying of the cornerstone of the office building of the house of representatives President Roosevelt said in part: The material problems that face us today are not such as in Washington's time, but the underlying facts of human nature are the same now as they were then. Under altered external form we war with the same tendencies toward evil that were evident in Washington's time and are helped by the same tendencies for good. It is about some of these that I wish to say a word today.

In Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" you may recall the description of the man with the muck rake, the man who could look no way but downward, with the muck rake in his hand; who was offered a celestial crown for his muck rake, but who would neither look up nor regard the crown he was offered, but continued to rake to himself the filth of the floor.

A Potent Force For Evil.

In "Pilgrim's Progress" the man with the muck rake is set forth as the example of him whose vision is fixed on carnal instead of on spiritual things. Yet he also typifies the man who in this life consistently refuses to see aught that is lofty and fixes his eyes with solemn intensity only on that which is vile and debasing. Now, it is very necessary that we should not flinch from seeing what is vile and debasing. There is filth on the floor, and it must be scraped up with the muck rake, and there are times and places where this service is the most needed of all the services that can be performed. But the man who never does anything else, who never thinks or speaks or writes save of his feats with the muck rake, speedily becomes not a help to society, not an incentive to good, but one of the most potent forces for evil.

There are in the body politic, economic and social, many and grave evils, and there is urgent necessity for the sternest war upon them. There should be relentless exposure of and attack upon every evil man, whether politician or business man; every evil practice, whether in politics, in business or in social life. I hail as a benefactor every writer or speaker, every man who on the platform or in book, magazine or newspaper with unrelenting severity makes such attack, provided always that he in his turn remembers that the attack is of use only if it is absolutely truthful. The liar is no whit better than the thief, and if his mendacity takes the form of slander he may be worse than most thieves. It puts a premium upon knavery untruthfully to attack an honest man or even with hysterical exaggeration to assail a bad man with untruth.

Indiscriminate Assault.

Now, it is easy to twist out of shape what I have just said, easy to affect to misunderstand it, and if it is shrouded in repetition not difficult really to misunderstand it. Some persons are sincerely incapable of understanding that to denounce mud slinging does not mean the indorsement of white-washing, and both the interested individuals who need white-washing and those others who practice mud slinging like to encourage such confusion of ideas. One of the chief counts against those who make indiscriminate assault upon men in business or men in public life is that they invite a reaction which is sure to tell powerfully in favor of the unscrupulous scoundrel who really ought to be attacked, who ought to be exposed, who ought, if possible, to be put in the penitentiary. If Aristides is praised overmuch as just, people get tired of hearing it, and over-censure of the unjust finally and from similar reasons results in his favor.

Any excess is almost sure to invite a reaction, and unfortunately the reaction, instead of taking the form of punishment of those guilty of the excess, is very apt to take the form either of punishment of the unoffending or of giving immunity and even strength to offenders. The effort to make financial or political profit out of the destruction of character can only result in public calamity. Gross and reckless assaults on character, whether on the stump or in newspaper, magazine or book, create a morbid and vicious public sentiment and at the same time act as a profound deterrent to able men of normal sensitiveness and tend to prevent them from entering the public service at any price. As an instance in point I may mention that one serious difficulty encountered in getting the right type of men to dig the Panama canal is the certainty that they will be exposed both without and I am sorry to say, sometimes within congress to utterly reckless assaults on their character and capacity.

At the risk of repetition let me say again that my plea is not for immunity to but for the most unsparring exposure of the politician who betrays his trust, of the big business man who makes or spends his fortune in illegitimate or corrupt ways. There should be a resolute effort to hunt every such man out of the position he has disgraced. Expose the crime and hunt down the criminal, but remember that even in the case of crime, if it is attacked in sensational, lurid and untruthful fashion, the attack may do more damage to the public mind than the crime itself. It is because I feel that there should be no rest in the endless war against the forces of evil that I ask that the war be conducted with sanity as well as with resolution. The men with the muck rakes are often indispensable to the well being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck and to look upward to the celestial crown above them, to the crown of worthy endeavor. There are beautiful things above and around about them, and if they gradually grow to feel that the whole world is nothing but muck their power of usefulness is gone. If the whole picture is painted black there remains no hue whereby to single out the rascals for distinction from their fellows. Such painting daily induces a kind of moral color blindness, and people affected by it come to the conclusion that no man is really black and no man really white, but they are all gray. In other words, they neither believe in the truth of the attack nor in the honesty of the man who is attacked. They grow suspicious of the accusation as of the offense. It becomes well-nigh hopeless to stir them either to wrath against wrongdoing or to enthusiasm for what is right, and such a mental attitude in the public gives hope to every knave and is the despair of honest men.

Forces For Truth Stronger Than Ever.

There is any amount of good in the world, and there never was a time when loftier and more disinterested work for the betterment of mankind was being done than now. The forces that tend for evil are great and terrible, but the forces of truth and love and courage and honesty and generosity and sympathy are also stronger than ever before. It is a foolish and timid, no less than a wicked thing, to blink the fact that the forces of evil are strong; but it is even worse to fail to take into account the strength of the forces that tell for good.

In his ecclesiastical polity that fine old Elizabethan divine, Bishop Hooker, wrote:

"He that goeth about to persuade a multitude that they are not so well governed as they ought to be shall never want attentive and favorable hearers. Because they know the manifold defects whereunto every kind of regimen is subject, but the secret lets and difficulties, which in public proceedings are innumerable and inevitable, they have not ordinarily the judgment to consider."

This truth should be kept constantly in mind by every free people desiring to preserve the sanity and poise indispensable to the permanent success of self government. Yet, on the other hand, it is vital not to permit this spirit of sanity and self command to degenerate into mere mental stagnation. Bad though a state of hysterical excitement is, and evil though the results are which come from the violent oscillations such excitement invariably produces, yet a sudden acquiescence in evil is even worse. At this moment we are passing through a period of great unrest—social, political and industrial unrest. It is of the utmost importance for our future that this should prove to be not the unrest of mere rebelliousness against life, of mere dissatisfaction with the inevitable inequality of conditions, but the unrest of a resolute and eager ambition to secure the betterment of the individual and the nation. So far as this movement of agitation throughout the country takes the form of a fierce discontent with evil, of a determination to punish the authors of evil, whether in industry or politics, the feeling is to be heartily welcomed as a sign of healthy life.

If, on the other hand, it turns into a mere crusade of appetite against appetite, of a contest between the brutal greed of the "have nots" and the brutal greed of the "haves," then it has no significance for good, but only for evil. If it seeks to establish a line of cleavage, not along the line which divides good men from bad, but along that other line, running at right angles thereto, which divides those who are well off from those who are less well off, then it will be fraught with immeasurable harm to the body politic.

We can no more and no less afford to condone evil in the man of capital than evil in the man of no capital. The wealthy man who exists because there is a failure of justice in the effort to bring some trust magnate to an account for his misdeeds is as bad as and no worse than the so called labor leader who clamorously strives to excite a foul class feeling on behalf of some other labor leader who is implicated in murder. One attitude is as bad as the other and no worse.

It is a prime necessity that if the present unrest is to result in permanent good the emotion shall be translated into action and the action shall be marked by honesty, sanity and self-restraint. There is mighty little good in a mere spasmodic reform. The reform that counts is that which comes through steady, continuous growth. Violent emotionalism leads to exhaustion.

Taxation of Vast Fortunes.

It is important to this people to grapple with the problems connected with the amassing of enormous fortunes and the use of those fortunes, both corporate and individual, in business. We should discriminate in the sharpest way between fortunes well won and fortunes ill won; between those gained as an incident to performing great services to the community as a whole and those gained in the evil fashion by keeping just within the limits of mere law honesty. Of course no amount of charity in spending such fortunes in any way compensates for misconduct in making them. As a matter of personal conviction and without pretending to discuss the details or formulate the system I feel that we shall ultimately have to consider the adoption of some such scheme as that of a progressive tax on all fortunes beyond a certain amount, either given in life or devised or bequeathed upon death to any individual—a tax so framed as to put it out of the power of the owner of one of these enormous fortunes to hand on more than a certain amount to any one individual; the tax of course to be imposed by the national and not the state government. Such taxation should of course be aimed merely at the inheritance or transmission in their entirety of those fortunes swollen beyond all healthy limits.

Again, the national government must in some form exercise supervision over corporations engaged in interstate business—and all large corporations are engaged in interstate business—whether by license or otherwise, so as to permit us to deal with the far reaching evils of overcapitalization. This year we are making a beginning in the direction of serious effort to settle some of these enormous problems by the railway rate legislation. Such legislation, if so framed, as I am sure it will be, as to secure definite and tangible results, will amount to something of itself, and it will amount to a great deal more in so far as it is taken as a first step in the direction of a policy of superintendence and control over corporate wealth engaged in interstate commerce, this superintendence and control not to be exercised in a spirit of malevolence toward the men who have created the wealth, but with the firm purpose both to do justice to them and to see that they in their turn do justice to the public.

The first requisite in the public servants who are to deal in this shape with corporations, whether as legislators or as executives, is honesty. This honesty can be no respecter of persons. There can be no such thing as unilateral honesty. The danger is not really from corrupt corporations. It springs from the corruption itself, whether exercised for or against corporations.

But in addition to honesty, we need sanity. No honesty will make a public man useful if that man is timid or foolish; if he is a hot-headed zealot or an impracticable visionary. As we strive for reform we find that it is not at all merely the case of a long uphill pull. On the contrary, there is almost as much of breaching walls as of collar work. To depend only on truces means that there will soon be a run-away and an upset. The men of wealth who today are trying to prevent the regulation and control of their business in the interest of the public by the proper government authorities will not succeed, in my judgment, in checking the progress of the movement. But if they did succeed they would find that they had sown the wind and would surely reap the whirlwind, for they would ultimately provoke the violent excesses which accompany a reform coming by convulsion instead of by steady and natural growth.

Dangerous Opponents of Real Reform.

On the other hand, the wild preachers of unrest and discontent, the wild agitators against the entire existing order, the men who act crookedly, whether because of sinister design or from mere puzzle headedness, the men who preach destruction without proposing any substitute for what they intend to destroy or who propose a substitute which would be far worse than the existing evils—all these men are the most dangerous opponents of real reform. If they get their way they will lead the people into a deeper pit than any into which they could fall under the present system. If they fail to get their way they will still do incalculable harm by provoking the kind of reaction which in its revolt against the senseless evil of their teaching would enthrone more securely than ever the very evils which their misguided followers believe they are attacking.

More important than aught else is the development of the broadest sympathy of man for man. The welfare of the wage worker, the welfare of the tiller of the soil, upon these depend the welfare of the entire country. Their good is not to be sought in pulling down others. But their good must be the prime object of all our statesmanship.

Materially we must strive to secure a broader economic opportunity for all men, so that each shall have a better chance to show the stuff of which he is made. Spiritually and ethically we must strive to bring about clean living and right thinking. We appreciate that the things of the body are important. But we appreciate also that the things of the soul are immeasurably more important. The foundation stone of national life is and ever must be the high individual character of the average citizen.

It has caused more laughs and dried more tears, wiped away diseases and driven away more fears than any other medicine in the world. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes beautiful women, 35 cents. Smith Drug Co.

PRAY AMONG RUINS

Sabbath Services Held in San Francisco Parks.

WIPE OUT SECTARIAN LINES

Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant Forget Denominational Differences and Worship the Lord at One Shrine in the Open Air.

San Francisco, April 23.—On the steps of the shattered churches and on the green slopes of parks and cemeteries the people of San Francisco assembled at the usual hours for religious services.

Grateful for the opportunity to publicly express thanks for their preservation and anxious for the words of cheer and comfort that will carry them through future trials, the people assembled in even larger numbers than is customary.

Worship at One Shrine.

There was no distinction as to sect or denomination, the gatherings, including, as a rule, a large percentage of the families camping or residing in the vicinity.

Catholic clergymen celebrated masses in the Jewish cemetery. People of every creed knelt with bowed heads while the services were in progress.

On the steps of St. Mary's cathedral and on the uphauled pavement of Golden Gate park, overlooking the blackened waste that commenced just across the street, Archbishop Montgomery celebrated mass at eight o'clock. The service was attended by thousands covering the church steps and extending well up and down the street in either direction. The archbishop's words and his reference to the death of Fire Chief Sullivan affected the entire assemblage, tears streaming down hundreds of faces upturned to the tiny altar in the doorway of the vestibule, while the broken sob-swept in a wave of sound from end to end of the congregation.

Prayer Meeting in Refuge.

In almost total darkness, with a heavy mist dropping like rain from the trees overhead, a prayer meeting was held Saturday night in the center of Jefferson square, where hundreds of the homeless have taken refuge. A choir sang several hymns and there was a sermon which made a stirring appeal for renewal of courage.

Telegraphic Service.

The telegraphic situation is improving, new circuits being opened, enabling the companies to send an increased volume of business. At the Western Union office a dozen clerks are kept busy receiving messages to be sent out. Most of the messages received are addressed to people who lived in the burnt district of San Francisco, and it is impossible to deliver them.

Considerable confusion has resulted in estimating the number of casualties and exaggerated reports have been sent out.

Distribute Hot Coffee.

The homeless people are no longer obliged to subsist upon bread and canned stuff entirely, as they had been during the previous days of their trying experience, but were given hot coffee, canned meats and even cakes and oranges. Oranges have come in plentiful supply from southern California, and the sight of California's famous product was everywhere hailed with words of delight.

It must not be understood, by the charitable people of the country that there is a surfeit of food for the sufferers. While the supply is abundant at this writing, it is well for the public to remember that the homeless thousands must be fed and cared for by the organized relief committees for an indefinite period. It is desired, therefore, that contributions be continued everywhere until the people who have been rendered helpless and destitute by the city's misfortune can care for themselves.

Solve Water Problem.

The water situation, while causing inconvenience to the people, is no longer such a problem. About two-thirds of the remaining section of the city is being supplied with sufficient water for the pressing domestic needs; but, of course, there is not yet enough to be had for fire fighting purposes. Because of this fact, the most stringent orders have been issued by the military and civil police that no fires shall be built within any house, and no lights, not even a candle light, can be shown at night in the houses. All cooking for the present must be done on the sidewalks or in the open streets and in daylight.

Relief Work Should Be Given Over, Says Roosevelt.

Washington, April 23.—The following statement was issued from the White House Sunday afternoon:

To the Public: After full consultation with Secretary Taft, the president of the American National Red Cross association, who also as secretary of war is controlling the army work and the expenditure of the money, probably two millions and a half, appropriated and to be appropriated by congress for the relief of San Francisco I wish to make the following suggestion:

"Contributions both in money and in kind are being given most generously for the relief of those who have suffered through this appalling calamity. Unless there is a proper organization for handling these contributions they will in large part fail to reach the very people whom it is most to be desired they should reach. The American National Red Cross association has sent out to take charge of the relief work Dr. Edward Devine, general secretary of the Charity Organization Society of New York, whose experience has been very large in work of this kind. Dr. Devine will work in conjunction with Judge Morrow, United States circuit judge of the Ninth circuit, and the head of the California Red Cross association. Gen. Funston has already been directed to cooperate with Dr. Devine and has advised the secretary of war that he will do so. Secretary Metcalf, who is on his way to the Pacific slope, will at once put himself in touch with Dr. Devine, as well as with the judge, the Governor of California and the mayor of San Francisco; to see if there is anything else the administration can do, and he will assist in all possible ways the efforts to systematize what is being done. I recommend that all charitable and relief organizations and individuals who desire to contribute do so through the Red Cross association, and that where provisions and supplies be sent they be consigned to Dr. Devine, Red Cross, San Francisco, and that Dr. Devine be notified by telegraph of the consignments. At the same time Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, the treasurer of the New York Red Cross association in New York, may be notified that the consignments have been sent to Dr. Devine, or else the notification can be sent to Hon. Charles H. Keep, assistant secretary of the treasury, Washington, D. C., and treasurer of the American National Red Cross association. I also suggest that all contributions that have already been forwarded be brought to the attention of Dr. Devine by telegraph, which telegram should state the name and address of the consignee and the amount and nature of the consignment. It is better to send all moneys to Mr. Keep or Mr. Schiff, they will then be telegraphed to Dr. Devine as the money is needed."

INSANE ARE KILLED.

One Hundred Patients Caught in the Ruins of Agnew Institution. Sacramento, Cal., April 23.—A special to the Union from Agnew says: The work of taking out the bodies of patients who were killed in the wreck of the buildings, is still going on. At the present time it is estimated that at least 100 are dead.

The cupola over the administration department went down, and all the wards in that part of the building collapsed. Twelve attendants were killed and Dr. Kelly, second assistant physician, was instantly crushed to death. There were 1,100 patients in the hospital and C. L. Searles, secretary of the state commission in lunacy, who has been attending to official business, declares that it is a marvel that many more were not killed. Dr. T. W. Hatch, superintendent of the state hospitals for insane, is in charge of the work of relief.

One hundred patients have been transferred to the Stockton asylum and others will be transferred if necessary. It is believed that 40 or 50 patients have escaped. The actual number will not be known until the dead are all taken from the ruins, and the roster of the patients has been examined.

RUIN IN LUMBER TOWN

Fire and Earthquake Destroy Fort Bragg, One Person Being Killed.

Berkeley, Cal., April 23.—A private letter received Sunday brings the information that Fort Bragg, one of the principal lumbering towns of Mendocino county, was almost totally destroyed as the result of a fire following the earthquake of last Wednesday morning.

The bank and other brick buildings were leveled as a result of the tremor and within a few hours fire had completed the work of devastation. One person only of the 5,000 inhabitants was killed; but scores were injured. Relief expeditions were at once sent to Fort Bragg from surrounding towns and villages, and the people of the ruined area are being cared for.

Governor Expresses Thanks.

Washington, April 23.—President Roosevelt Sunday received the following telegram from Gov. Pardee, of California, dated Oakland:

"The President, Washington: Thanks for ships. Conditions much better. Fire out; weather cool; people cheerful and being quite well taken care of. No epidemics; whole country vying to extend our people aid and sympathy. We appreciate very much your help."

MAY SUE DOUGHERTY SURETIES

Members of New Board Favor Demanding Settlement in Full. Peoria, Ill., April 23.—As the result of the school election held on Saturday, seven out of 16 members of the board of school inspectors are avowed opponents of the Stevens' resolution, and favor a reopening of the investigation of the school treasurer for the Dougherty shortage. It is thought that on a test vote the party favoring suit on the bonds can muster a majority. The election was fought on the issue of suing the treasurers' bondsmen. Six out of the eight newly elected members were from the litigation party. The board will hold its next meeting May 7.

WOMEN NOT TRUTHFUL

This Statement Has Been Unjustly Made, Because Modest Women Evade Questions Asked By Male Physicians.

An eminent physician says that "women are not truthful; they will lie to their physician." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex.

It is a terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women.

Is it any wonder, then, that women continue to suffer and that doctors fail to cure female diseases when they cannot get the proper information to work on?

"This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham's, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients, through her correspondence with them, than the physician who personally questions them."

If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

The fact that this great boon, which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in:

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

Mrs. Ella Lee, Frankford, Ind., writes: "I want to thank you for what your medicine has done for me."

"Three years ago I had a serious female trouble. I was under the doctor's care for about three months, and the only time I was not in pain was when under the influence of morphine. The doctor finally said I never would be better, and would be an invalid the rest of my life. I had given up in despair, but one evening I came across one of your advertisements and decided to write you for advice. I did so and commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began to improve at once, and today I am a well woman, and I know it is all due to your advice and medicine."

Mrs. J. H. Farmer, of 2809 Elliott Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I cannot thank you enough for what your advice and medicines have done for me. They have done me more good than all the doctors I ever had."

"For the last eight years I have suffered with female troubles, was very weak, had nervous prostration, and could not do my work; but I am happy to say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a different woman of me. I am in perfect health and have gained in weight from 10 to 125 pounds."

The Brethren

By RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "She," "King Solomon's Mines," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1903-1904, BY RIDER HAGGARD

CHAPTER III.

ON the last day of November, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a great procession might have been seen winding its way from the old hall at Steeple. In it rode many knights fully armed, before whom were borne their banners. These went first. Then came old Sir Andrew D'Arcy, also fully armed, attended by squires and retainers. He was accompanied by his lovely daughter, the Lady Rosamund. Next appeared the brethren, modestly arrayed in simple garments, followed each of them by his squire. After them rode yet more knights, squires, tenants of various degree and servants.

Following the road through the village, the procession turned to the left at the great arch which marked the boundary of the monks' lands and headed for Stangate abbey, some two miles away. At length they came to the stone gate of the abbey that gave the place its name of Stangate. Here they were met by a company of the Cistercian monks, who dwelt in this wild and lonely spot upon the water's edge, headed by their prior, John Fitz Brien. He was a venerable, white-haired man, clad in wide-sleeved black robes and preceded by a priest carrying a silver cross. Now the procession separated.

Should he abandon hope? Should he fight the battle for fear that he might be defeated? Nay, he would fight on in all honesty and honor, and if he were overcome would meet his fate as a brave knight should—without bitterness, but without shame. Let destiny direct the matter. It was in the hands of destiny, and, stretching out his arm, he threw it around the neck of his brother, who knelt beside him, and let it rest there until the head of the weary Wulf sank sleepily upon his shoulder, like the head of an infant upon its mother's breast.

At length the gray dawn broke, and the sunlight, passing through the eastern window, like a golden spear pierced the dusk of the long church, which was built to the shape of a cross, so that only its transepts remained in the shadow. Then came a sound of chanting, and at the western door entered the prior, wearing all his robes, attended by the monks and acolytes, who swung censers. In the center of the nave he halted and passed to the confessionals, calling on Godwin to follow.

So he went and knelt before the holy man, and there poured out all his heart. He confessed his sins. They were few. He told him of his deep love, his hopes, his fears and his desire to must be loyal in sorrow as in joy. Be sure that you take no base advantage of your brother in the hour of temptation and bear him no bitterness should he win the battle.

Then Wulf also returned to the altar rails, and the full-mass was sung and the sacrament received by the two neophytes and the offerings made. All in their appointed order. Next they were led back to the priory to rest and eat a little after their long night's vigil in the cold church, and here they abode awhile, thinking their own thoughts, seated alone in the prior's chamber. At length, Wulf, who seemed to be ill at ease, rose and laid his hand upon his brother's shoulder, saying:

"I can be silent no more. It was ever thus; that which is in my mind must out of it. I have words to say to you."

"Speak on," Wulf said Godwin.

Wulf sat himself down again upon his stool and for awhile stared hard at nothing, for he did not seem to find it easy to begin this talk.

"It is of our cousin Rosamund, is it not?" asked Godwin presently.

"Aye, who else?"

"And you would tell me that you love her, and that, now you are a knight—almost—and hard on five and twenty years of age, you would ask her to become your affianced wife?"

"Yes, Godwin, it came into my heart when she rode the gray horse into the water."

"Then, Wulf," answered Godwin slowly, "what more is there to say? Ask on and prosper. Why not? We have some lands, if not many, and Rosamund will not lack for them. Nor do I think that our uncle would forbid. If she wills it, seeing that you are the properest man and the bravest in all this countryside."

"Except my brother Godwin, who is all these things and good and learned to boot, which I am not," replied Wulf. "Godwin, our ill luck is that you love her also, and that you thought the same thoughts which I did yonder on the quay head."

"Godwin flushed a little. 'It is so,' he said quietly. 'To my grief it is so. But Rosamund knows nothing of this and should never know it if you will keep a watch upon your tongue. Moreover, you need not be jealous of me, before marriage or after.'

"What, then, would you have me do," asked Wulf hotly, "seek her heart and perchance, though this I doubt, let her yield it to me, thinking that you care naught for her?"

"Why not?" asked Godwin again, with a sigh. "It might save her some pain and you some doubt and make my own path clearer. Marriage is more to you than to me, Wulf, who think sometimes that my sword should be my spouse and duty my only aim."

"Who thinks having a heart of gold, that even in such a thing as this you will not bar the path of the brother whom you love. Nay, Godwin, sooner would I bid you all farewell and go to seek fortune or death in the wars without thought spoken."

"Leaving Rosamund to pine, perchance. Oh, could we be sure that she had no mind toward either of us, that would be best to be gone together! But Wulf, we cannot be sure, since it seems to be honest, I have thought she loves you."

"And at times to be honest, Godwin, I have been sure that she loves you. Although I should like to try my luck and hear it from her lips, which on such terms I will not do."

"What then is your plan, Wulf?"

"My plan is that if our uncle gives us leave we should both speak to her first, as the elder, setting out your case as best you can and asking her to think of it and give you your answer within a day, then, before that day is done, I also should speak."

"It is very fair," replied Godwin, "and worthy of you, who are the most honest of men. Yet, Wulf, I am troubled. See you, my brother, have ever brethren loved each other as we do? And now must the shadow of a woman fall upon and blight that love which is so fair and precious?"

"Why not?" asked Wulf. "Come, Godwin, let me make a pact that it shall not be thus and keep it by the help of heaven. Let us show the world that two men can love one woman and still love each other, not knowing as yet which of them she will choose. If, indeed, she chooses either. Is it your will that we should make such a pact?"

"Godwin thought a little, then answered:

"Yes, but if so, it must be one so strong that for her sake and for both our sakes we cannot break it and live with honor."

"So be it," said Wulf. "This is man's work, not child's make-believe."

Then Godwin rose and, going to the door, bade his squire, who watched without, pray the prior John to come to them, as they sought his counsel in a matter. In the end, kneeling together in the chamber, they repeated this oath after him, both of them together:

"We, brethren, Godwin and Wulf, D'Arcy, do swear by the holy cross of Christ, that being both of us enamored of our cousin, Rosamund, D'Arcy, we will ask her to wife in the manner we have agreed and no other; that we will abide by her decision, should she choose either of us, nor seek to alter it by tempting her from her faith or in any fashion overt or covert; that if of us whom she refuses will, thenceforth be a brother to her and no more; however Satan may tempt his heart otherwise; that in war or peace we will remain faithful comrades and brethren. Thus we swear with a true heart and purpose, and in token thereof, knowing that he who breaks this oath will be a knight dishonored and a vessel fit for the wrath of God, we kiss this rod and one another."

To Steeple, preceded by the squires, who rode before them bareheaded, carrying their swords by the scabbard points, with their gold spurs hanging from the bits, the brethren came at last. Here the hall was set for a great feast, a space having been left between the tables and the doors, to which the brethren were conducted.

"I know the trouble," answered the prior anxiously, "and with less noble natured men it might be grave. But if it should come to this, then must the lady judge according to the wishes of her own heart, and be who loses her must be loyal in sorrow as in joy. Be sure that you take no base advantage of your brother in the hour of temptation and bear him no bitterness should he win the battle."

LAST RITES FOR 500

Half a Thousand Bodies Have Been Placed in Graves.

PROPERTY LOSS, $300,000,000

Expert Insurance Men Put the Value at That Figure After Trip Over Twenty-Six Miles of Burned District in Automobile.

San Francisco, April 23.—Out of chaos order has come in San Francisco. With the fire extinguished, the hungry fed, and the wounded cared for, the people are beginning to awaken from their stupor and view the awful ruin that has come upon the city.

Searchers are going through the ruins and up to midnight Sunday 500 bodies have been removed and buried. How many more the huge piles of wreckage and ashes contain no one knows, and perhaps no one will ever know. Many of the bodies already recovered were burned beyond recognition, and many others may have been entirely consumed. A complete list of the dead is unobtainable, but many declare that it will contain 1,000 names or more.

Expert insurance men declare that the property loss will not be less than $300,000,000.

Area of Burned District.

An automobile, spun on a tour of inspection around the burned district, returned to its starting place with its odometer showing that it had traveled exactly 26 miles. Of course, there was much zig-zagging, as the machine followed the line of fire, but the total length shows the awful extent of the conflagration.

Within this circumference little was left but charred ruins and huge piles of wreckage. And once there stood the stateliest business blocks in California and the palatial residences of some of the richest men of the state. All of them bowed before the fury of the earthquake and the anger of the flames.

Loss Is Exaggerated.

Washington, April 23.—The loss of life at San Francisco is estimated at less than 300 in a telegram addressed to the secretary of the Interior by Superintendent of the Mint Leach. The telegram is dated at Oakland Saturday and is as follows:

"Stories of loss of life greatly exaggerated. Have been in it every day from the first. Have men reporting to me continually from all parts of the city and I do not believe the list will reach 400. My estimate from statements to me will not reach 300. The fire did not travel fast and the authorities took trouble to keep ahead of the flames, notifying people of the danger and caring for the helpless.

The homeless are being cared for in Oakland and other suburban places. Thousands are camped out in the park and other open country south of the city. People are beginning to get into the ruins in places, especially from Market street, and I am informed that some of the modern buildings, like the Spreckels, Crocker, Union Trust, Mutual Savings, all of which having banking institutions can be fixed so as to be able to allow banks to resume after some form in a few days. I am told, Crocker-Woolworth and Union Trust hope to open up by Monday.

Another message of the same date from Superintendent Leach says: "In the matter of establishment of a bureau of information suggested by you, I find relief committees in both cities are trying to accomplish this purpose with the aid of the press. I had a talk with the manager of the Western Union, who thinks it impracticable at this time to try to get through such information as the wires are more than 48 hours behind with private and official messages. I would suggest that reassuring telegrams be spread through the country that stories of loss of life have been most grossly exaggerated. Loss of life and list of injured is exceedingly small considering the extent of the disaster."

Universal Postal Congress.

Rome, April 23.—It is understood that the universal postal congress has given votes to Australia, New Zealand, the Transvaal colony, and the Orange River colony; a deliberative vote to Ethiopia; and a consultative vote to China. The next meeting of the congress will be held in 1911 in Australia.

TWENTY MEN ARE DEAD IN COLORADO BLOW-UP

Windy Shot Ignites Dust and Crushes Out Life of Workers Below the Surface.

Trinidad, Col., April 23.—As the result of a dust explosion in a mine of the Colorado & Fuel Iron company, 40 miles west of Trinidad, shortly before noon Sunday, 22 miners are known to be dead and one other is missing with little hopes of being found alive.

There were 40 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. Seventeen miners, who were working 3,700 feet from the entrance, escaped uninjured through another opening. The explosion occurred in rooms three and four near the main entrance and was the result of a windy shot which ignited the dust. An order for 22 coffins has been received by a local undertaking establishment here, that many bodies having been taken out during the afternoon. The mine was not badly damaged and work can be resumed in a couple of days. The mine gave employment to 180 men. Miners from adjacent camps are assisting in the rescue. General Superintendent Robt. O'Neill left here on a special train at noon and is personally directing the rescue work. Among the dead is James E. Reed, fire boss. Most of the others are Italians and Japanese.
